Designed for inservice training, the guide provides basic information from which teachers of the educable mentally retarded can develop their own instructional program in social studies. The focus is on developing respect for law and authority. Suggestions are made for both incidental and systematic teaching. Three starter units for teaching law and order to the educable mentally retarded treat safety for the primary age level, bike riding for the intermediate age level, and understanding the law for the advanced level. Each unit includes the following: selection of unit; sub-units; general objectives; core area activities; resource materials; vocabulary; and lesson plans consisting of objectives, activities, resource materials, and an experience chart. The appendix provides 31 pages of sketches for use on bulletin boards or for making overhead projector transparencies. Forms for teacher evaluation of the guide are included. (LE)

POLICY STATEMENT

Please Read

The Special Education Curriculum Development Center has as its main objective the operation of a statewide in-service training program for teachers of the mentally retarded. Twenty special class teachers from different geographic areas serve as consulting teachers. They attend training sessions at the University of Iowa and then return to their home area to conduct field sessions. All materials prepared for SECDC are intended for dissemination through the field sessions conducted by the consulting teachers. Persons reading SECDC material but not attending the field sessions should keep in mind that the purpose of the material is to serve as a starting point for in-service training and that the publications themselves are not end products.

It should also be noted that any reference to commercially prepared materials by the Special Education Curriculum Development Center does not constitute a recommendation or endorsement for purchase. The consideration of such material is intended solely as a means of assisting teachers and administrators in the evaluation of materials.

The evaluation sheets found at the conclusion of this material represent the continuing effort of the Special Education Curriculum Development Center to meet the needs of the Special Class teacher. It is requested that teachers using this material record statements and specific evaluation points as indicated and submit this to the Center.

The time and effort given to this report will be greatly appreciated. You may be assured it will receive serious consideration in structuring guidelines for further development of materials to be disseminated.

DEVELOPING RESPECT FOR LAW AND AUTHORITY

One Aspect of the Social Studies Program for the Educable Mentally Retarded

INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this material on law and authority, like all publications prepared by SECDC, is designed to provide teachers basic information from which they can develop their own instructional program. The area of Social Studies ranked high in priority among the teachers participating in the Survey of Curriculum Practices conducted by SECDC in the winter of 1967. In comparing the requests from teachers for assistance in the area of Social Studies with current literature on the subject, it became apparent that it would be presumptuous to undertake the development of material for the broad area of Social Studies. Consequently it was decided that SECDC could be most helpful to the special class teacher by focussing on selected areas of concern to teachers on which there is a minimum of information and materials available.

The content of this document in general relates to law and authority. Particular emphasis is given to the provision of experiences which contribute to the development of positive attitudes and to teaching information relevant to law and authority.

It is generally agreed among special educators that one of the major goals of special education is the development of good citizenship. This involves the development of certain patterns of behavior and attitudes. The prominence of citizenship education on any list of educational school objectives is justified considering the complex society in which mentally retarded students will live. Society will expect them to maintain themselves independently in the community and to adjust to the responsibilities and requirements of adult life.

Obedying the law and displaying the proper respect for authority are recognized as necessary activities for responsible citizenship. The development of respect for law and authority as a behavioral goal would appear to be of utmost importance for all individuals, whether mentally retarded or of normal intelligence, if they are to make a satisfactory adjustment to adult life.

A review of special education curriculum guides suggests that a specific program of instructional methods and materials for use in teaching areas of knowledge, skills, and attitudes about law observance has not been developed. One may hypothesize from this that special education curriculum planners have assumed knowledge of the law and respect for authority to be something which is learned incidentally through experiences in living or which teachers can include in the curriculum with a minimum of direction.

Penny, in a doctoral dissertation done at the University of Iowa states, "The research evidence that has been accumulated suggests that students in regular classes do not acquire an adequate understanding of society's rules and standards of behavior through incidental learning along. If this is the case for individuals of normal intelligence, one would anticipate students with more limited ability to learn from experience to be even more deficient in these concepts."¹

¹Penny, Sue. "Older Educable Mentally Retarded Students' Attitudes Toward and Understanding of Selected Aspects of the Law." Unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, University of Iowa, Iowa City, 1967, pp. 6-7.

If instruction aimed at developing a basic respect for law and authority is to be included in special class programs, there is probably little need to treat this topic as a separate curriculum area, assuming that sufficient attention is given to the general teaching of some attitudes and skills. There are numerous natural opportunities to teach the important ideas in the context of the social studies program. Through the life experience unit method approach, functional skills and behaviors as well as basic knowledge about the laws which directly affect individuals in their daily living can be developed.

INCIDENTAL TEACHING THROUGH UNITS

Many unit topics lend themselves to the inclusion of activities aimed at developing attitudes of appreciation, need for, and respect of the law. While some topics such as "Citizenship" are quite obvious, other unit subjects also provide opportunities for teaching information relative to the law even though the basic unit theme appears interrelated. Examples of such unit topics are listed below, with several illustrative activities given for each topic. These activities are not inclusive but rather should serve to stimulate ideas for other types of activities that can be utilized at various instructional age levels.

Unit Topic: School Orientation

Suggested Activities:

1. Discuss the need for rules and regulations to govern classroom procedures such as when to sharpen pencils, how to act in the halls, where to keep books and school supplies, etc.
2. Diagram the line of authority found in a school system, i.e., the teacher has authority over the students, the principal has authority over the teacher, the superintendent has authority over the principal, the school board has authority over the superintendent.

3. Explain the school locker system and discuss why each person is assigned his own locker.

On one day have each child hang on to his own coat, hat, mittens, lunch bag, etc., for an hour. Discuss the importance of having a place where personal belongings can be safely kept.

4. Establish the rule that no one may open nor take things from students' or teachers' desks without first asking permission. Call attention to the fact that this rule applies to teachers as well as students.

5. Let students vote to decide on various procedures or activities to be followed in the classroom. Vote secretly by covering eyes or by ballot; stress that the majority rules but the minority has a right to their opinion.

6. Ask the school janitor to keep track of the number of hours it takes him to clean up the bathrooms after students scribble dirty words on the walls, repainting and refinishing walls and furniture that has been carved and scratched, picking up litter in the building and playground, etc. Determine the janitor's hourly pay and figure how much money is spent cleaning up after irresponsible students. Discuss where this money comes from and what it might be better spent for.

7. Stress that every student in the classroom has a right to have a turn, e.g., being first in line, being "It" in a game, etc.

8. Set up a court in the classroom to settle disputes that arise in the room or on the playground. Let students assume the roles of judge, jury members, attorneys, etc.

Unit Topic: Grooming

Suggested Activities:

1. Read the school's regulations concerning appropriate apparel and discuss the reasons for such regulations.
2. Explain that there are laws governing the companies who make cosmetics and grooming products. They have to make sure the products are safe for people to use.

Unit Topic: The Community

Suggested Activities:

1. When discussing the people in the community who help us dramatize being firemen, policemen dogcatchers, pool lifeguards, teachers, street cleaners, night watchmen, etc.
2. Study the people who make and carry out local laws such as the city councilmen, the mayor, the city attorney, the police chief, the traffic court judge, the juvenile court judge and probation officer, etc.
3. Find out about local civil defense programs, facilities and regulations. Point out that such programs are set up to protect the people of the community.
4. List all the things that policemen do to help us that do not involve enforcing laws, e.g., helping lost children, giving directions, getting cats out of trees, supplying a master key when a person is locked out of his car, administering first aid, talking to school classes, checking on someone's home when they're on vacation, etc.

Unit Topic: Home and Family

Suggested Activities:

1. Make posters about safety rules to be followed in the home. Discuss that it is necessary for everyone to follow rules so no one will get hurt.
2. Discuss not wearing brothers' or sisters' clothing, playing with their toys, etc., without first asking permission.
3. Discuss individual family curfews for teen-agers. Talk about why curfews are set, how they're enforced, etc.
4. Compile a list of local ordinances with which a property owner must comply, e.g., removing diseased elm trees from private property, removing old junk cars from yards, burning trash in suitable receptacles, regulations concerning keeping livestock within city limits, etc. Discuss why these ordinances have been adopted.
5. Make "private" boxes for children to take home. Reinforce cardboard shirt boxes, decorate and label. Talk with the parents about the importance of letting the children keep their papers, small toys and precious possessions in these private places without fear of them being disturbed.
6. Study various kinds of leases and rental contracts for houses. Discuss what kinds of provisions are outlined, e.g., dates for payment of rent, procedures for terminating a lease or contract, etc. Have a lawyer talk to the class about what they should know before they sign a lease, what they will be legally responsible for when they have signed, what they should do if difficulties arise with a landlord, etc.

Unit Topic: Taking a Trip

Suggested Activities:

1. Take snapshots of public parks, roadsides and streets that are defaced and littered. Discuss how this looks, what should be done about it, etc.
2. Discuss what would happen if there were no traffic laws when people were traveling. Write experience charts stressing that traffic laws, like other laws, are based on an attitude of fair play toward others.

Unit Topic: Budgeting

Suggested Activities:

1. When preparing budget plans, discuss that included in the cost of items are taxes such as sales tax, gasoline tax, cigarette tax, etc. List some of the ways this tax money is used in the community.
2. Take a field trip to a bank. Discuss that banks are governed by various laws and regulations set up to protect the people from having their money misused or stolen.

Unit Topic: Newspaper

Suggested Activities

1. Notice the section of the local newspaper that reports recent marriage licenses that have been issued. Discuss other licenses we have to get - a bicycle and car license, a drivers license, a dog license, etc. Find out how much each costs, various procedures for getting licenses, where to get them, etc.

2. When reading an account of a crime such as burglary, discuss why this behavior is considered a crime. Read about the court proceedings, the penalty imposed, etc. Emphasize the necessity for laws protecting peoples' property; also discuss the rights of the accused.
3. Make a bulletin board display of newspaper pictures and stories about accidents that have been caused by not observing safety rules or traffic laws.
4. Hold a series of discussions on the "Why?" of civil disobedience when riots, protest marches, etc. appear in the news. Discuss why these things happen and what some of the causes are. Also point out the results of such actions and discuss if this is the best way to try to solve problems. Tape record discussions of the role of mob psychology in civil disorders and how quickly people can become caught up in a mob reaction.
5. When the Iowa General Assembly is in session, select a major bill such as consideration of lowering the voting age requirements. Read the newspaper and follow the progress of the bill through the legislative processes. Discuss how and why laws may be written or changed.
6. During a local strike collect and display news stories and pictures about the labor dispute. Ask a union official to tell the class how the dispute is being negotiated. Have a representative of management and a union member who is on the picket line explain how they will vote on the proposed contract.
7. Display pictures of cities shrouded in smog. Discuss how laws may be passed to make industries, automobile owners, etc., spend money for equipment in order to decrease the amount of pollutants in the air. Discuss how such laws help protect the health of all citizens in the community.

Unit Topic: Preparing for Work Experience

Suggested Activities:

1. Dramatize work situations such as an employee receiving criticism from the boss, listening to and carrying out various kinds of directions and orders, etc.
2. Discuss how a person who is a good worker is a good citizen in his community, i.e., by doing his work well he helps his industry or business produce good products or service, he is conscientious and considerate of others, etc.
3. Diagram the line of authority found in a factory employment situation, e.g., workers, foreman, general foreman, factory supervisor, plant manager. Discuss the responsibilities of each position.

Unit Topic: Leisure Time

Suggested Activities:

1. Try to play a game without following any rules. Evaluate the results; point out that someone may get hurt, some people may not get turns, play equipment may get broken, the game may not be any fun, etc. Play the game again, this time following the rules. Compare the two ways of playing the game.
2. Find out if there are city ordinances requiring the leashing of pets, etc. Discuss that such regulations are necessary to protect other people's property.

3. Find out what the laws of the state of Iowa are concerning hunting and fishing, e.g., requiring licenses, daily limits and possession limits, season dates, etc. Have a conservation officer speak to the class about his job of enforcing these laws.
4. Find examples of No Trespassing and No Hunting signs. Explain that a land owner has the right to refuse to let people hunt on his property. Find out the legal consequences of trespassing on posted land.
5. Look at a hunting license and note the statement printed at the top, "Respect private property; ask the farmer first." Discuss the importance of asking permission before hunting on a farmer's land, not leaving gates open, being careful not to frighten or injure livestock, etc.
6. Show pictures of Indians hunting buffalo. Discuss why there are so few buffalo now. Compare to present game laws.
7. Discuss the law banning the sale and use of fireworks in Iowa and the reasons for this law. Find pictures and stories in newspapers of accidents involving fireworks and point out that this law is not always strictly enforced. Discuss why this might be so. Also point out that some other states such as Missouri do not have a law banning fireworks.

Unit Topic: Department Store

Suggested Activities:

1. Have a store manager talk to the class about the precautions the store takes to prevent shoplifting and the methods used to apprehend violators. Discuss the need for laws dealing with shoplifting.

2. Make a simple file from a cardboard box in which to keep store receipts for clothing and other items purchased. Discuss the importance of requesting and keeping receipts, e.g., these can be used to prove that you have already paid for something; receipts also serve to protect the store when making refunds on returned merchandise, etc.

Unit Topic: Driving a Car

Suggested Activities:

1. Make a chart listing traffic rules that must be followed when driving a car. Examples are:

You must have a driver's license. The maximum speed limit on most highways is 70 miles an hour.

You must signal with your turning signals before you turn off the highway. Discuss the importance of enforcing these laws and the role of the highway patrolman, traffic court judge, etc.

2. Dramatize situations in which young people might be tempted to swipe hubcaps or steal a car. Try to decide what makes people want to do this; discuss if this is a temptation many young people might face.

3. When studying for the drivers' license exam, discuss if driving a car is a right each individual has or if it is a privilege. Explain the differences and the responsibilities that are inherent in a privilege. Make a list of offenses for which a drivers' license can be revoked.

Unit Topic: Health Habits

Suggested Activities:

1. If a student signs his parent's name to an absence excuse, use the opportunity to discuss the implications of signing someone else's name on anything.

2. Make a series of pictures showing how a Healthy Harry covers up his mouth when he has to sneeze. When he is very sick, he stays home in bed. Discuss following these good health rules so other people won't get sick.

3. Attempt to determine why there are laws that say using narcotics or LSD is a crime. See films, talk with doctors, read articles that tell how these drugs affect the human body and the effects drug addiction can have on a person's life.

4. Write letters to the State Department of Health asking for brochures and information regarding health laws of the state, e.g., quarantines on communicable diseases, immunization requirements, etc. Discuss how these laws help protect each citizen's physical well-being.

5. Take a field trip to the community's water plant and talk with local water department officials. Observe measures taken to insure a pure water supply and precautions taken to guard against water pollution.

Unit Topic: History of Our Town

Suggested Activities:

1. When planning field trips to places of local historical interest, decide on necessary rules and regulations concerning behavior and conduct on the trip. Discuss possible consequences if rules are not followed.
2. Find out what some of the laws were when the town was very young, e.g., laws concerning use of firearms, trapping and hunting rights, horse traffic on Main Street, etc. Discuss why such laws were necessary then but are no longer needed. Compare to some present-day laws such as speed limits in town, zoning regulations, etc.

3. Plan a fun session with some old "blue laws." Visit the city hall or courthouse to look for old code books and records.

Unit Topic: Post Office

Suggested Activities:

1. When mailing a thank-you letter to a resource speaker, discuss the need for correct postage. Talk about what will happen if no stamps are put on letters or if too little postage is used.
2. Explain what is meant by the term, "tampering with the mail." Discuss that this is a Federal offense.

Unit Topic: Television

Suggested Activities:

1. Discuss family rules and regulations concerning TV curfews, programs to watch, etc. Talk about how disagreements are settled, compromises that are decided upon, etc.
2. When reviewing favorite programs, bring out the role of the ranch foreman or ship commander. Discuss his position of authority, why this is necessary, etc.

Unit Topic: Food

Suggested Activities:

1. Select one food item from the school hot lunch menu, e.g., milk. Make charts showing how laws protect the people who consume this food product by regulating sanitary conditions, etc., from the dairy farm, to the dairy that bottles it, to the school lunch program that serves it to the students.

2. Visit local restaurants and food stores to find out what rules and regulations they must follow when preparing and handling food. Discuss how these regulations are enforced, e.g., who conducts periodic inspections, how often they are inspected, what kinds of things the inspector checks on, etc.

SYSTEMATIC TEACHING OF INFORMATION ON LAW AND AUTHORITY

The opportunities to capitalize on incidental situations in teaching information relative to law and authority are numerous. While the teacher should incorporate such experiences into her program, it is at least equally important to plan for the sequential and systematic teaching of certain legal requirements of life. Penny states, "In addition to research findings, authorities in the area of education and law have increasingly suggested the need for direct teaching of our laws. Within the last year articles have appeared by Brodvelt in The Grade Teacher, by Joyce in The Instructor, and by Denvir in the Catholic School Journal stressing to teachers the need for planned instruction to increase knowledge of the law."²

Because structured programs on this particular topic are not available for the educable mentally retarded, teachers will find it necessary to formulate their own materials. Life Experience Units represent a meaningful method through which content in this area of social studies can be organized. It is the practice of SECDC to include Starter Units in curriculum publications related to instructional areas in which teachers will most likely be teaching units. Certain unit topics provide good vehicles for systematic teaching pertaining to law and authority. At the primary age level a unit on Safety which emphasizes the importance of following rules, of being concerned about other people's well-being, etc., will contribute to the formation of habits of lawful obedience. A unit on Bike Riding at the intermediate age level can include instruction in traffic laws, licensing requirements, and respect for other people's property. At the advanced level a unit on Understanding the Law could be taught. This topic could deal with specific teaching of the laws of society that directly affect individuals in their daily living.

Starter Units will be developed in accordance with the Guidelines for the Development of Life Experience Units, distributed by SECDC in May, 1967. In general they will include the completed preliminary steps plus approximately ten lessons. Sufficient information will be included to allow the teacher to complete the unit utilizing her own ideas and gearing the activities to the specific needs of her group.

Teachers vary in the techniques they use in introducing units just as they differ in how they organize the content of units. Consequently the sample lessons are not necessarily suggestions for the first lesson to be taught. Teachers are encouraged to use the starter units as the basis for developing more comprehensive units.

Three illustrative starter units are included in this publication. Safety, Bike Riding and Understanding the Law are the unit topics. These starter units are not inclusive nor exhaustive. It should be noted that various aspects of the unit topics do not lend themselves directly to the teaching of respect for law and authority and consequently are not included. It is hoped that the suggested activities therefore will serve as a stimulus to teachers as they devise their own teaching techniques.

STARTER UNIT

PRIMARY LEVEL

Safety - An Opportunity to Teach Respect for Law and Authority

STEP I: SELECTION OF UNIT

A unit on safety at the primary level provides an opportunity to present various fundamental concepts upon which the laws of our society are based. By learning safety rules students can be led to see that rules or laws are made to help protect people and property and that each individual has a responsibility for his own safety and the safety of others. Respect for authority can be developed through consideration of those people who help enforce safety rules.

STEP II. SUB-UNITS

- A. Fire Prevention
- B. The Community
- C. School Orientation
- D. Newspaper

E. Telephone

F. Home and Family

G. Community Helpers

H. Property Rights

STEP III. GENERAL OBJECTIVES

- A. To help the student become aware of specific safety rules.
- B. To help students develop an understanding that safety rules help protect physical well-being as well as property.
- C. To help students become aware of the responsibility of each individual in following safety rules.

D. To develop an appreciation of those people in authority who enforce safety rules.

STEP IV. CORE AREA ACTIVITIES

A. Arithmetic Activities

1. Discuss in general terms how expensive accidents can be, e.g., paying the doctor bill when he has to take care of a person who has been injured, repairing or replacing buildings that have been damaged by fires, replacing toys, etc., that got broken when someone trips over them, paying a hospital bill when someone is hurt seriously, etc.
2. Draw maps of the school showing where the fire alarm is located, where the fire escapes are, where the fire extinguishers are, etc.
3. Find out in general terms how the local fire department is financed, e.g., taxes, charges made for answering calls, etc.

B. Social Competency Activities

1. Look at newspaper pictures and stories about fires caused by children playing with matches.
Discuss the result of someone not following a safety rule, e.g., damage to someone's property, possible injury or death to the children involved as well as to other people, etc.
2. Dramatize the adventures of a puppet who does not see why following safety rules is important.
Show what happens to him, to other people, to people's property, etc., when safety rules are not obeyed.
3. Prepare a series of transparencies entitled, "People Who Help Us Follow Safety Rules." Include parents, teachers, school nurse, school bus drivers, the school bus inspector, and the state fire marshal.

4. Ask the school bus inspector and the fire marshal to show and explain to the children how they inspect the buses and school building and what important safety rules they help enforce.
5. Discuss notifying an adult immediately if an emergency arises. Dramatize situations at home, at school, in the neighborhood, etc., where children must find help quickly.
6. Discuss that sometimes adults do not follow safety rules. Find newspaper stories of accidents caused by adult carelessness such as trash fires getting out of control, children suffocating in old refrigerators that have been left sitting around, fires resulting from someone smoking in bed, etc. Point out the often tragic effect of one person's carelessness on other people's lives.
7. Discuss each important safety rule. On a large chart, write sentences under the following headings: Me, Other People, My Things, Other People's Things. Tell what might happen if each safety rule were not followed.
8. Arrange to have a child visit the class who had been injured in an accident caused by carelessness (e.g., a serious cut caused by running with a pair of sharp scissors). Have him tell how the accident happened, the effects of the injury, etc.
9. Dramatize what would happen if even one person does not do what they're supposed to do during a fire drill. Discuss that if each child is responsible for following the rules the evacuation will be orderly and safe.

C. Communications Skills Activities

1. Look for the word POISON and the picture of a skull and crossbones on cans and bottles of household cleaners, bleaches, garden sprays, kerosene, etc.
2. Make signs listing emergency telephone numbers, e.g., fire department, police station, doctor office. Discuss posting these signs by the telephone; send home with each student.
3. Make safety signs and tape record warning signals such as fire alarm bells, railroad crossing signals, police sirens, etc.
4. Read books and stories about safety; collect and display safety posters and pamphlets.
5. Make booklets and include important safety rules. Draw pictures to illustrate each rule.

D. Safety Activities

1. Learn how to turn in a fire alarm. Dramatize calling the fire department on the telephone, turning in an alarm from a public alarm box, etc.
2. Develop a bulletin board display. List each important safety rule and draw pictures to illustrate.
3. Discuss and dramatize proper procedures to follow during a fire drill at school.
4. Write experience charts about the importance of a family planning and practicing escape routes if their home should catch on fire. Send copies of the charts to the parents.
5. Learn how to remove a fire extinguisher from its bracket and how to operate it.

STEP VII: LESSON PLANS

Sample lesson plans for ten lessons are included in this starter unit. These lessons do not attempt to cover the entire unit topic but rather should serve as a guide for the teacher.

The first lesson suggests how the unit may be introduced and is concerned with the first general objective of the unit, A. To help the student become aware of specific safety rules. This objective is not developed fully in this lesson, however. Additional lessons dealing with safety at school, on the school bus, when walking, etc. could be devised.

The next three lessons cover the general objective, B. To develop the understanding that safety rules help protect physical well-being as well as property.

The next six lessons are all lettered D and are concerned with teaching the last objective, D. To develop an appreciation of those people in authority who help enforce safety rules.

OBJECTIVES	ACTIVITIES	RESOURCE MATERIALS	EXPERIENCE CHART
A. To help the student become aware of specific safety rules 1. Safety rules at home	1. Introduce the unit by arranging to have a child visit the class who had been injured in an accident caused by carelessness (e.g., a serious cut caused by running with a pair of sharp scissors). Have him tell how the accident happened, how he was injured, what medical attention or hospitalization was required, any permanent damage that resulted, etc. 2. Discuss that some accidents are not very serious - a small scratch or bruise may be the only result. But other accidents can cause serious injury or even death. Stress that every accident has the potential of being serious. Ask, "Are there some things we can do so accidents won't happen to us?" Show a picture of a cartoon-type character and suggest that she can help us learn how to follow safety rules so we won't have accidents and get hurt. Put the picture on the bulletin board and discuss the caption. On the bulletin board also display pictures of various rooms in a house. With colored yarn, draw outlines of the rooms, the roof of the house, etc. Have Safe Living Lil visit each room in the house and tell an important safety rule that should be followed. Write these rules on strips of oaktag and mount on bulletin board: Put toys away. Be careful of broken glass. Don't play with cans of cleaner or spray. Do not play with matches. Stay away from the stove. Do not play with electric cords. Do not play with knives or scissors. Do not put a plastic bag over your head. Do not get into old refrigerators. Don't take medicine by yourself.	Resource person - a child who had been injured in an accident Bulletin board Picture of "Safe Living Lil" - (see Appendix, P. 104. B. To help students develop an understanding that safety rules help protect physical well-being as well as property	1. Dramatize the adventures of a puppet who does not see why following safety rules is important. Tell the following story: "Careless Carl was supposed to pick up his wagon and truck and other toys but he didn't want to. His mother said someone would trip over them and fall if he left them all over the floor, but Careless Carl didn't pay any attention. He went to the kitchen to get a dish of potato chips to eat while he watched Captain Kangaroo. When he went back in the living room he stepped on the wagon and fell down. The dish flew across the room and broke. Mother started to clean up the broken glass when she cut herself and had to go get a band-aid. She told Careless Carl that he better go outside to play - but to be careful. "Of course Careless Carl wasn't careful outside either, though. He and his neighbor Silly Sam started to play war in the back yard. They were playing that the enemy was hiding in Mr. Hardy's garage next door and they charged forward with their guns and bayonets as fast as they could. The garage door didn't come open like they thought it would. One stick pushed through a window and broke it and cut Silly Sam a little bit. The knife slipped and cut Careless Carl's arm very badly. "Mother had to call the ambulance to take Careless Carl to the hospital. His arm was cut so badly the police had to drive along and turn on their siren so they could get to the hospital in a hurry. "Careless Carl had to stay in the hospital for awhile. One day he decided to play horses and cowboy. He tied the electric cord from the lamp to the bed and started pulling on it. Of course his mother always told him not to play with electric cords but Careless Carl didn't pay any attention. The cord caused a short circuit and a fire started, burning the sheets on the hospital bed. A nurse smelled the smoke and turned in the fire alarm. "The people who were in the hospital all had to be taken outside while the firemen came and put out the fire. Careless Carl's hospital room was all burned and some other rooms got all smoky and wet. What a mess Careless Carl caused!"

	2. Make a list of all the people who were involved because of Carl's carelessness, e.g., his mother when she cut herself on the broken dish, Mr. Hardy, the neighbor, when his garage window was broken, Silly Sam when he was cut on the broken window, the police and ambulance driver who had to take Careless Carl to the hospital, the doctors and nurses who took care of Carl, the people in the hospital who had to be moved outside when the fire broke out, the firemen who came to put out the fire, the people who had to clean up the rooms and repaint and fix the room where the fire was, etc. 3. Write experience chart and read orally. 4. Seatwork: Assemble the experience charts to make a large class book. Make covers; print the unit title, Safety Rules, and paint pictures to decorate. Fasten the book together with large brass fasteners; add charts from succeeding lessons. 5. Ask, "Why do we have safety rules like Don't Play With Knives?" Bring out that we have rules like these to help keep us and other people from getting hurt or killed. Safety rules also help keep things that belong to people from getting damaged. Discuss why people might not follow safety rules. Discuss that sometimes adults do not follow safety rules even though they should know better. Display newspaper pictures and stories of accidents that have been caused by adult carelessness. Examples might be property damage due to trash fires burning out of control, children suffocating in old refrigerators that have been left sitting around, fires resulting from someone smoking in bed, etc. Point out the often tragic effect of one person's carelessness on other people's lives. 3. Let the children dramatize a situation with the hand puppet, this time showing how Careless Carl can become Careful Carl. Compare the results of being careless or being careful. 4. Write experience chart and read orally. 5. Seatwork: Draw "before" and "after" pictures of Careless Carl and Careful Carl. Show and discuss the pictures. 6. BIKE RIDING - AN OPPORTUNITY TO TEACH RESPECT FOR LAW AND AUTHORITY

STARTER UNIT

INTERMEDIATE LEVEL

Bike Riding - An Opportunity to Teach Respect for Law and Authority

STEP I. SELECTION OF UNIT

This unit topic can serve as an effective tool in the initial teaching of basic respect for law and authority. Through learning about traffic and safety rules which are relevant for safe bicycle riding, important groundwork is laid for future decisions relative to the law. For example, most educable youth will later drive cars or operate machinery which are subjected to traffic laws. Licensing regulations can become a real learning experience for students when they actually register their own bikes. An understanding of property rights, the role of law authorities, and court proceedings can evolve from discussions of bicycle theft and its ramifications.

STEP II. SUB-UNITS

- | | |
|------------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| A. Transportation | E. Licensing Regulations |
| B. Traffic Laws | F. Property Rights |
| C. Safety | G. Law Enforcement Authorities |
| D. Courtesy and Respect for Others | H. Juvenile Courts |

STEP III. GENERAL OBJECTIVES

- A. To help pupils appreciate that bicycle riding is an appropriate and acceptable mode of transportation for this age group
- B. To teach knowledge of and respect for traffic laws and safety rules when riding a bike.

- C. To teach courtesy toward others using the same form of transportation
- D. To help pupils understand state and local bicycle licensing regulations
- E. To help pupils understand the importance of keeping a bike in good mechanical order
- F. To help pupils develop a basic understanding of property rights
- G. To help pupils understand and respect the role of law enforcement authorities
- H. To help pupils gain some understanding of juvenile court proceedings

STEP IV. CORE AREA ACTIVITIES

A. Arithmetic Activities

1. Find out the fee that is charged for registering bicycles.

2. Compile a price list showing the cost of various bicycle parts, tires, repairs.

Have students get this information from mail order catalogs, hardware stores, service stations, repair shops, etc.

3. Have pupils license their bikes and record the registration numbers.

4. Discuss the period of time for which a bike license is issued.

5. Use a tire pressure guage to read the number of pounds of pressure in a bicycle tire.

B. Social Competency Activities

1. Discuss the circumstances when a bike is used by the students as a means of getting to various places. Find pictures in magazines of a school, store, ball game, etc. to illustrate the previously mentioned situations.

2. Make a list of bike safety and traffic rules. Try to determine the reasons for these rules and write sentences telling why each is important.

3. Dramatize proper behavior and etiquette when riding bikes, e.g., not crowding another rider off the road, waiting your turn to get your bike from the parking rack after school, etc.
 4. Take a field trip to the City Hall and complete the necessary procedures for licensing a bicycle.
 5. Determine what constitutes ownership. Make charts listing some things owned by individual students, some things owned by their families, some things owned by the school, some things owned by the city.
 6. Prepare a "science fiction" story about a city where all property rights were abolished. Assign various character parts to students and tape record the story.
 7. Paint a series of pictures on a long strip of craft paper; use a large box as a screen for this "movie." Entitle it, "One Day in the Life of Sergeant Johnson." Develop a narrative to accompany the pictures.
 8. Present a case history involving a bicycle theft. Investigate the case including the theft, the apprehension of the offender, the legal proceedings involved, etc.
 9. Visit a juvenile court judge; talk with him and the probation officer.
- C. Communicative Skills Activities
1. Make a Bicycle Safety Inspection Check List.
 2. Compile lists of bicycle traffic and safety rules.
 3. Prepare questions to ask the juvenile court judge and probation officer.
 4. Fill out the necessary forms for licensing a bike.

5. Write thank you letters to resource speakers.
6. Write labels and captions for a bulletin board display showing the various parts of a bike.
7. Listen to tape recordings of case histories and stories.
8. Practice recognizing the shapes of traffic signs and reading the words printed on them.

D. Safety Activities

1. Practice using hand signals and discuss when to use them.
2. Dramatize following traffic rules when riding a bike.
3. Dramatize what might happen if there were no regulations and everyone rode a bike just as he pleased. Compare to the dramatization when traffic rules were followed.
4. Discuss the safety aspects of various traffic regulations, e.g., stop signs are placed at intersections to help prevent collisions, an ambulance uses its siren to clear traffic so it won't be involved in an accident, etc.
5. Discuss and write experience charts about the importance of having a bike in good mechanical condition and properly equipped. Talk about possible consequences if the brakes do not work, if the chain slips, if the handlebars are loose, etc.

STEP VII. LESSON PLANS

Sample lesson plans for nine lessons are included in this starter unit. These lessons do not attempt to cover the entire unit topic but rather should serve as a guide for the teacher.

The introductory lessons are not included. Rather, the first three lessons cover the second general unit objective, B. To teach knowledge of and respect for traffic laws and safety rules when riding a bike.

The next four lessons are all lettered F and are concerned with teaching the sixth general objective, F. To help pupils develop a basic understanding of property rights.

Part of the final general objective, H. To help pupils gain some understanding of juvenile court proceedings, is developed in the last lesson plan.

OBJECTIVES	ACTIVITIES	RESOURCE MATERIALS	EXPERIENCE CHART
B. To teach knowledge of and respect for traffic laws and safety rules when riding a bike	1. Make plans for a dramatization of students riding bikes to school. Arrange the classroom to represent the area around the school building. Mark out streets, areas where buses load and unload, the area where bike racks are located, etc. Suggest that all laws, rules and regulations be abandoned and that people may ride their bikes any way they want to. Dramatize the situation and evaluate the result. Discuss what happens when there are no rules to govern the way people act. If weather permits this activity may be conducted on the playground.	Bike Rules Rules and laws and regulations help make bike riding safe and fun. If there weren't any rules, people might hit your bike. People might leave their bikes on the playground and someone could get hurt.
1. To teach awareness of relevant laws and rules	2. Dramatize riding to school on bicycles again, this time following traffic rules and being careful of other people. Compare the two dramatizations and decide which situation is the most preferable. 3. Suggest, "If rules and regulations help make bike riding safer and more fun, perhaps we should discuss what rules and traffic laws are important for us to know when we're riding our bikes." Let students suggest rules they think are important; using a grease pencil on a clear plastic transparency, write the rules on the overhead projector as they are contributed. Guide the discussion to include a listing similar to the following:	Overhead projector Clear plastic transparencies Grease pencil	Bicycle rules help keep the streets and schoolground from being a big mess. B. Traffic laws and safety rules (Con't.) 2. To help pupils understand the reasons for specific bicycle rules	1. Call attention to the bulletin board display of pictures and sentences about bike rules. Consider each specific rule and discuss the reasons for the rule and why each is important. Examples of the kinds of discussions are: (a) "Ride in the street and not on the sidewalk." Bring out that this should be followed so the bike won't run into people who are walking along the sidewalk, or push them off onto the grass. This is important so people won't get hurt. The sidewalk is supposed to be for people who are walking. The street is for bikes or cars that can go faster. Pedestrians, or people who are walking, have a right to walk along without being afraid of getting pushed off onto the grass. (b) For the rule "Park in the right places and in the right way" discuss that if a bike is propped up against the bike rack instead of placed in the rack as it should be it could fall down on top of someone else's bike and break it. If a bike is left on a sidewalk or yard or in the middle of the playground someone might fall over it and get hurt. (c) For the rule "Don't weave around" bring out that the rider might lose control of the bike and fall off and get hurt. If a car is following someone who is weaving back and forth it can't pass the bike.	Picture of a bike rider; mount on experience chart Tape recorder Newsprint Crayons Oaktag sentence strips Bulletin board display developed in previous lesson	Reasons for Rules and Laws Rules and laws aren't made just to be mean to people. The reasons for having them are to help people keep safe and happy. If we try to figure out the reasons for rules and laws it helps us to see the importance of following them.

	2. Show the class a chart entitled Why We Have Rules and Laws. (Make chart, using a large sheet of oaktag. Cut a series of flaps and paste pieces of paper behind each "window." In these spaces write the following sentences): a. Rules and laws help keep people from getting hurt. b. Rules and laws help keep people's things from getting broken or stolen. c. Rules and laws help keep things from getting all mixed up. d. Rules and laws help make sure everyone has the right to do what he wants as long as it doesn't hurt someone else. Open the flaps one at a time and read and discuss each sentence. Pick out examples of bike rules that illustrate each sentence, e.g., riding a bike in the street and keeping the sidewalk for pedestrians is an example of how laws help keep things from getting all mixed up. Think what would happen if there were no special place for cars and bikes to drive. 3. Write experience chart and read orally. Select a student to tape record the story. 4. B. Traffic laws and safety rules (Con't.) 3. To help pupils understand and appreciate the need for enforcement of rules and laws	1. Review previous lesson by re-reading experience chart, Reasons for Rules and Laws. Discuss again what might happen if people don't follow and obey rules and laws. Ask, "Who helps us by seeing that we follow bike rules?" Bring out that parents help enforce the rules, that is, they say that rules and laws are to be followed. Also discuss how teachers or the principal enforce bike rules around the school building. Policemen help enforce traffic and bike laws when people ride bikes on the streets. 2. In an attempt to establish the idea that law or rule enforcement is for the good of all ask the following kinds of questions: a. "How do you feel when your parents tell you to go put your bike away when you have left it in the middle of the yard?" "Why do they tell you to do this?" "Do they have a right to make you do this even if you don't want to?" b. "What should a policeman do if he sees you ride through a busy intersection without stopping at a stop sign?" "Does he have a right to tell you how to act or what you should do? Why or why not?" "Should you stop at the stop sign if the policeman is there--but go through it if he isn't around? Why or why not?"	Experience chart	Enforcing the Rules Laws need to be enforced--someone has to have the authority to see that people follow the rules. Laws are enforced for the good of everybody. Parents, teachers, policemen, and other people help to see that we don't hurt ourselves or someone else. They want to help us and are not just being mean.

	3. Guide students in drawing generalizations from such a discussion and write experience chart. Tape record the story. Use the charts and tape recordings for review. 4. In large prominent letters print the word "ownership." Display the chart for a period of time before calling specific attention to it. 2. During class time ask students if they have figured out the word and if they know what it means. Elicit a definition such as "Ownership is when something belongs to you. You either bought it or someone gave it to you." Give opportunities for students to name some of the things they own. 3. Have students make charts using the following headings: Things that Belong to Me Things that Belong to my Family Things that Belong to my School	18"x24" sheet of oaktag Magic markers	Ownership The word ownership means something belongs to you. Discuss what should be listed on the third chart. Bring out that things such as chalk, books, playground equipment, etc., are owned by the school. The school gets money to buy these things from taxes paid by people. Discuss examples of students paying sales tax when buying a bicycle tire, the taxes taken from or withheld from parent's paychecks, etc. School supplies and equipment are to be used by all students. Include on the last chart city parks, city playgrounds and equipment, city hall building, etc. Discuss that these things are also paid for with tax money. These things are for the use of all people who live in the city. Because people pay taxes and this tax money is used to buy the park equipment, etc., all the people who live in the city in a way own the city property. 4. Write experience chart and read orally. Duplicate the chart story and give copies to each student for their individual folders. 5. Include information such as the kind of bike, what it looks like, how long they've had it, if they bought it or it was a present, if it belongs just to them or if they share it with a brother or sister, etc. Have students read their paragraphs; if they ride their bikes to school go outside to see them. Discuss that the bikes are owned by the students - they belong to them because they paid money for them or their parents paid money for them.			Paste and scissors

If they own property, they have certain property rights . On a bulletin board put up the heading, Property Rights . OBJECTIVES

F. To help develop a basic understanding of property rights (Con't.)

3. To help the pupils understand that laws are made to protect the property of individuals

ACTIVITIES

1. Review the concept of property rights by reading the experience chart from the previous lesson. Also refer to the bulletin board display developed in that lesson.
2. Discuss what might happen if someone does not respect your property rights, for example, what would happen if someone damaged or stole your bike? Bring out that there are laws which say people should not steal a bike. If someone does take a bike, he is breaking this law. Discuss the possible consequences and briefly explain that if a young person steals a bike he would probably have to appear in juvenile court. Help students formulate the generalization that laws are made to help protect people's property.
3. Prepare a "science fiction" story about a city where all property rights and laws protecting people's property have been abolished. Depict situations such as (a) Someone grabbing people's headscarves or caps as they walk along the street (b) Someone barging into a house, watching television and eating all the popcorn (c) Bikes being stolen from the school grounds; students tearing up library books and gym equipment; teachers swiping students' notebook paper and eating the food from their lunch boxes (d) People carelessly driving cars and trucks that were left parked on the street (e)

EXPERIENCE CHART

What Would It Be Like?

Laws are made to help protect people's property. If there weren't any laws, everything would be very confusing. People would get into lots of fights. Things would get broken and damaged. Policemen couldn't do anything to help.

Property rights and laws help people live together and be happier.

Hector: If you didn't get permission to ride his bike, do you have the right to take it? Pete: Well, I didn't hurt the bike. I don't know why Barney is so mad about it. Hector: When did you take his bike? Pete: Before he got out of school. He had to stay to finish some arithmetic problems. Hector: When Barney went to get his bike to ride home, did he know where it was? Pete: No, that's what made him so mad. He couldn't find his bike and he thought someone had stolen it. Hector: Well, he might think that. The bike was gone, anyway. Pete: Yeah, but I didn't steal it. I just borrowed it for awhile. Hector: But did Barney know that? Pete: Well..... 2. Let students manipulate the puppets and continue the story. Decide what Pete should do if he wants to ride Barney's bike again, what Barney should do, etc. 3. UNDERSTANDING THE LAW

STARTER UNIT

ADVANCED LEVEL

Understanding the Law

STEP I. SELECTION OF UNIT

The content of this unit is aimed at developing a basic understanding and appreciation of the law. A planned approach to the teaching of information on the law should help the mentally retarded youth formulate positive attitudes toward authority, become more conscious of his legal rights, and increase his awareness of the responsibility which he must assume as a citizen in his community. The intellectual limitations of the educable mentally retarded coupled with the potential consequences of the many social decisions that adolescents must make is sufficient reason for an emphasis on the law in the curriculum.

STEP II. SUB-UNITS

- | | |
|--------------------------------|--------------------------------|
| A. Criminal Law | E. Court Proceedings |
| B. Classification of Crimes | F. Legal Rights and Safeguards |
| C. Property Rights | G. Punishment of Law Violators |
| D. Law Enforcement Authorities | |

STEP III. GENERAL OBJECTIVES

- A. To develop an understanding of the necessity for criminal law and the enforcement of these laws.
- B. To help the students become familiar with specific laws of the state of Iowa concerning situations in which young people may encounter problems.

1. Consuming or possessing alcoholic beverages

2. Larceny

3. Auto theft

4. Burglary

C. To develop an understanding of the concept of juvenile status in terms of the law.

D. To help the student understand the role of law enforcement authorities. Related to this objective would be an emphasis on developing respect for law authorities.

E. To acquaint students with legal resources and the conditions under which they should have legal counsel.

STEP IV. CORE AREA ACTIVITIES

A. Arithmetic Activities

1. Find out the possible fines and/or length of imprisonment that may be imposed for various criminal offenses. Make charts comparing the punishment for different violations.
2. Read accounts in newspapers of the amount of money stolen or the value of property taken in breakins, armed robberies, etc.
3. Study a case history of a theft and attempt to compute the cost of that crime, e.g., the actual monetary loss to the rightful owner, the salaries paid to the investigating and arresting police officers, the salaries of the court judge and county attorney, etc., and the legal fees charged by the attorneys who defend the accused.
4. Discuss the definitions of a felony and a misdemeanor. Find examples in newspaper accounts of stolen items valued at less than $20.00 and stolen property whose value exceeds $20.00.

5. Point out that the age of a young person determines if he will be handled as a juvenile in a juvenile court or as an adult in regular court proceedings. Discuss how a person can prove his age.
6. Using the Federal Bureau of Investigation publication, Uniform Crime Reports or newspaper stories, find information concerning the number of auto thefts, shoplifting incidents, etc. that occur within one year. Compare these figures with statistics for a following year to determine if the number of violations has increased or decreased.
7. Find out the amount of money that may be involved when a person is ordered to pay court costs.
8. Get information about the fees that may be charged for legal counsel.

B. Social Competency Activities

1. Try to decide why certain kinds of actions have been declared unlawful, e.g., drinking by young people, stealing other people's property, breaking into someone's home, etc. Discuss what would happen if there were no laws to govern such behavior.
2. Present case histories involving instances of shoplifting, stealing auto hub caps, drinking beer at a party, etc. Dramatize the cases and try to determine the possible reasons why young people may break the law.
3. Have a young person who has appeared in a juvenile court talk to the class about the situation that led to his appearance, the proceedings in the judge's chambers, etc.
4. Invite a juvenile court judge to talk to the class. Ask him to explain why young offenders are handled in a juvenile court rather than a criminal court.

5. Tape record interviews with a juvenile court judge, a probation officer and the county attorney. Ask them questions about juvenile court proceedings, age requirements for being handled as a juvenile, what is meant by the charge "delinquent child," why juvenile court proceedings are not open to the public, etc.
6. Visit a criminal court session. In the local newspaper read the accounts of the case being tried. At the conclusion of the case talk to the judge, the county attorney, the attorney for the defense, etc.
7. Discuss what is meant by "due process of law." Explain what this means to a juvenile offender and an adult offender brought before a criminal court.
8. Discuss the consequences of having a criminal record. Cite specific examples of the effect such a record can have on a person's life.
9. Present a case history involving the apprehension of a young offender by the police. Dramatize the situation assigning various students to play the parts of the policemen, the young person, the people whose property was stolen, etc. Stress the rights and responsibilities of each person involved.
10. Take a field trip to the local police headquarters or sheriff's office. Discuss with the law enforcement officials what they do when a young person is involved in a situation in which a law is violated.
11. Define the terms "felony" and misdemeanor." Discuss why this classification of crimes is important.

12. Present several case histories depicting situations involving the same kinds of offenses.
Point out that charges, legal procedures, punishments, etc. may vary with each case.

13. Discuss the possible school disciplinary action that may be taken against a student who encounters difficulty with the law, e.g., barred from participation in extra-curricular activities, possible expulsion from school, etc.

C. Communicative Skills Activities

1. Look up the specific laws dealing with larceny, burglary, etc. in the Code of Iowa. Copy onto experience charts; discuss the meaning of each section and write a paragraph rewording each section.
2. Compile a notebook. Include pertinent legal information and experience chart stories.
3. Prepare a glossary of important words and phrases.
4. Call the local anti-poverty agency to inquire if they offer legal aid and services to people in lower income brackets.
5. Look in the yellow pages of the telephone book for the names of attorneys who practice law in the community.
6. Formulate questions to ask when interviewing resource people.
7. Listen to tape recordings of case histories.
8. Write letters of invitation and thank-you notes to resource speakers.
9. Prepare a bulletin board display showing samples of reports made by arresting police officers, court transcripts, attorney's briefs, etc.

10. Look at various job application forms, forms to be completed when registering for Selective Service, etc. Note that information is requested concerning conviction for law violations.

D. Safety Activities

1. Read newspaper accounts of traffic accidents that have been caused by drunken driving. Discuss the consequences of these accidents, e.g., death, serious injury, damage to cars and other property, etc.
2. Tape record an interview with a doctor. Ask him to explain in simple terms how drinking beer or liquor affects a person, e.g., eyesight, reflexes, reactions, emotional control, etc.
3. Write experience charts and stress that laws are made and enforced to help protect people from accident and injury.

STEP VII: LESSON PLANS

Sample lesson plans for nine lessons are included in this starter unit. These lessons do not attempt to cover the entire unit topic but rather should serve as a guide for the teacher.

The first two lessons give suggestions for introducing the unit and are concerned with teaching the first general unit objective, A. To develop an understanding of the necessity for criminal law and the enforcement of these laws.

The next three lessons deal with the general unit objective B. To help the student become familiar with specific laws of the State of Iowa concerning situations with which young people may encounter problems. This objective is not covered in its entirety, however.

The objective C. To understand the concept of juvenile status in terms of the law is developed in the next two lesson plans.

Lessons lettered E suggest ways of teaching the last general objective, E. To acquaint students with legal resources and the conditions under which they should have legal counsel.

A. To help students develop an understanding of the necessity for criminal laws and the enforcement of these laws. 1. To define the term "criminal law."	1. Prepare a bulletin board display to introduce the unit. Using a variety of letter forms, display the following questions: (See illustration on next page.) What are laws? Why do we have laws? What do we need to know about laws? Whose job is it to see that people obey laws? Discuss the questions in general terms first; then draw specific attention to the question, "What are laws?" Give examples of different kinds of laws, e.g., traffic laws, laws about stealing, murder, breaking into a store, writing bad checks, etc. Explain that some laws are called "criminal laws." These are laws which say that if people do certain kinds of things they are committing a crime. Examples of criminal laws are laws about young people drinking, laws about stealing other people's property, laws about breaking into a store or filling station, etc. If it is proved that someone has committed a crime, they will be punished by being put in jail or having to pay some money (a fine) or perhaps both. 2. Display the volumes of the Code of Iowa. Explain that the laws of Iowa are written down in these books. Read one or two examples; note the terminology and interpret what it says.	Bulletin board	Criminal Laws Laws are written to tell people what they should not do. Make a transparency from a newspaper picture of a serious automobile accident involving a young person who has been drinking. Project the picture on the wall, moving the projector back until the picture appears life-size. Read the newspaper account of the accident and discuss the results of the accident - serious injury, possible death, permanent injury to the people involved, etc. Discuss why the accident happened and the effect of drinking on someone's ability to drive a car. 2. Arrange to tape record an interview with a doctor. Ask him to explain in simple terms how drinking beer or liquor affects a person, e.g., eyesight, reflexes, reactions, emotional control, etc. Play the recording for the students and discuss. 3. Discuss, "There is a criminal law in Iowa which says that anyone who is under 21 years old cannot possess nor consume any alcoholic beverages. What does this mean? Why is drinking by young people considered a crime? Why would they write a law like this?" Discuss that the law in some other states is not the same as in Iowa. eighteen. In Iowa, however, it is illegal, or against the law, for young people to drink any beer or liquor but that when a person becomes 21, it is no longer against the law to drink. Discuss that by the time someone is 21 he is supposed to be old enough to be able to decide for himself if he wants to drink and to realize and be responsible for the possible effects of alcohol. Point out, however, that some adults do have difficulty with drinking and although they can drink legally they may still get into trouble because of drunken driving, etc.

Telephones

4. Conduct a "Voice Your Opinion" telephone participation radio show. Start discussion by asking the question, "Do you think the law about young people drinking should be done away with?" Using telephones have students call in to express their opinions. Guide discussion by asking other questions such as "What could happen if there were no regulations and young people did drink as much as they wanted to? If there were no laws about drinking would it mean that every young person would want to drink? Should the legal age limit be lowered to 18? Why is there a law about young people drinking?"

Help students see the reasons why laws about young people drinking are necessary. Stress that when a person has been drinking he may do things or make decisions he wouldn't otherwise do. Also stress that these laws help protect young people from getting hurt (like in car accidents), as well as protecting other people and their property that

Consuming or possessing alcohol beverages	1. Invite the county attorney to speak to the class about what the laws say specifically about possession or consumption of beer or liquor by minors and furnishing alcoholic beverages to minors. (Define term, "minor" - a person who is younger than 21 years old.) Have him discuss the punishments the law prescribes for people (over 18 years of age) who break these laws: e.g., possession of beer by minors - 30 days in jail and/or $100 fine. Furnishing alcoholic beverages to a minor - a fine up to $500 and/or 1 year in jail. A tavern operator who serves beer to minors - loss of beer license and a fine, etc. Point out that the severity of these punishments show how important the laws are. 2. Show signs that are displayed at places where beer or liquor is sold. 3. They told Joe they had three six-packs of beer and were going out to an old deserted farmhouse to have a party. They invited Joe to come with them." Assign students to assume various character parts and act out the situation, depicting what they think Joe will do and what will happen. Discuss some of the reasons why young people are tempted to drink, e.g., wanting to feel grown up, pressure from other young people, wanting to be part of the group, etc. Explain that the story about Joe is based on a situation which really happened. The boy decided to go along with the group; the farmhouse was raided by the county sheriff and the boys were all arrested. They were all 18 or 19 and pleaded guilty to the charge of possession of beer by minors. They were each fined $100, and also had to pay court costs. Joe was kicked off the basketball team for the rest of the year. 4. Begin a glossary of important words and phrases. "Did Mrs. Smith break the law? Could Mrs. Smith be punished by the law since the store got its packages back? Was Mrs. Smith innocent of any crime since she was caught before she had a chance to use the things she took?"

"Suppose a person takes a package from a store and is caught as soon as he gets outside. Does the law say he can go free if he pays for the package?"

"Suppose a person took something from a store which he needed but didn't have money to pay for. Would he be innocent of a crime if he planned to pay for it when he got a job?"

3. Look in the Code of Iowa to see what the specific law says about shoplifting: "The fact that any person has concealed unpurchased goods or merchandise of any store or other mercantile establishment, either on the premises or outside the premises of such store, shall be material evidence of concealment of such article with the intention of converting the same to his own use without paying the purchase price thereof., and the finding of such unpurchased goods or merchandise concealed upon the person, or among the belongings of such person, shall be material evidence of willful concealment and, if such person conceals, or causes to be concealed, such unpurchased goods or merchandise, upon the person or among the belongings of another, the finding of the same shall also be material evidence of willful concealment on the part of the person concealing such goods."

The crime is a misdemeanor if the value of the property stolen is less than $20.00. These classifications are important because they determine the punishment for the crimes. Stress that a person who is convicted of a felony in a criminal court will have a criminal record. A juvenile does not get a record though, when he appears in a juvenile court. This is one of the important reasons for handling young people in a special court - so they won't get a criminal record and have to live with it the rest of their lives.

Look at different job application forms and forms to be completed when registering for Selective Service. Note that information is requested concerning convictions for law violations. Stress that if a person has a criminal record he can not get into the Army or other branches of service. Also stress how hard it is to get a job if a person has a record and how this can affect someone for his entire life.

3. Seatwork: Copy the information about juvenile courts and put in student notebooks.

The age of the person is what decides if he will be handled in a juvenile court.

6. Who appears in a criminal court?

Anyone who is accused of committing a crime who is not a juvenile.

7. Why is a young person handled in a juvenile court instead of a criminal court?

So the juvenile court judge can try to help the young person instead of just giving him a stiff punishment.

8. Where are juvenile court sessions held?

			Usually in the judge's office. They are not held in the regular courtrooms at the Court House.
			9. Can people attend a juvenile court session just to visit? No, a juvenile court is not open to the public. Only the people who are supposed to be there can come.
			10. What kind of punishment can a juvenile get in juvenile court? The judge can decide to send a juvenile to the state juvenile home in Toledo for awhile or put him on probation for a while, or just give them a lecture. A juvenile won't be given a jail sentence or have to pay a fine like an adult would.
			11. Can a juvenile have a lawyer with him when he appears in juvenile court?

------------	------------	--------------------	------------------

Yes, it is a good idea for a juvenile to have a lawyer with him. His parents should also appear in court with him.

12. What is a criminal record?

If a person is convicted of a felony, this gives him a criminal record. When a person has a record, he loses his rights as a citizen.

13. If a young person appears in juvenile court does he get a criminal record?

No, this is one reason why young people are handled in juvenile court instead of a criminal court.

He got in and drove the car around town until the police stopped and arrested him. Because he was only 15, he was ordered to appear in juvenile court." Ask, "Did the police have a right to stop and arrest Bill? Why?" Discuss the law that Bill violated or broke - using a motor vehicle without the owner's consent. This law was written to protect people's property from being misused. The police, by arresting Bill, were helping to enforce that law. Bring out people have a right to make a law to protect their property. But stress that people who are accused of breaking laws also have certain rights. 2. Arrange to visit with an attorney who has had experience dealing with juvenile cases. Ask him to explain what rights a juvenile has when he is accused of a crime and ordered to appear in juvenile court. Stress that a juvenile is entitled to counsel, that is to have a lawyer help him when he goes to court. His parents should be with him when he goes to court and they and the juvenile should understand fully the situation that led to the court appearance, the proceedings that are going on, and the charges that are being brought and 	Resource person - an attorney	Rights in Court Society has the right to bring people to court and to punish them if they're guilty of breaking a law. But people who have to appear in court have certain rights, too.
